SCHOOL REPORT.

We sincerely believe that our schools have made decided advancement during the year. They are not, indeed, above criticism, but good work has been done.

We have made fewer changes than usual in teachers. Between the fall and winter terms not a single change was necessary, and in the Hill Division the same teacher has been employed for five successive terms, an instance which has not occurred before, within the knowledge of your Board. To retain good teachers, once they are secured, is, we believe, a long step in the right direction.

The school year has been short, for we have paid unusually high wages to some of our teachers. We do not regret having done so, for we believe that a short term with a good teacher is better than a long term with a poor teacher. We have, in all possible cases, made the matter of wages a secondary consideration and the efficiency of the teachers our first.

We urge upon teachers the necessity of qualifying themselves for good work. The time is past when any young girl who has attended some high school for one or two terms was considered fully prepared for teaching. Our schools of to-day demand for teachers those who not only are well educated, but who have studied the best methods of imparting their knowledge. There was never a time when there were so many helps for teachers as at the present. Those who have not had the benefit of normal training need not, if they have energy, be behind. Educational papers are full of bright, practical suggestions, and the New Hampshire Teachers' Reading Circle cannot be too highly recommended. Two of our teachers were graduates of the normal school. We have added to the text books already in use, Cyr's Primer, and 1st and 2nd Readers, Nos. 2 and 3 of Seaside and Wayside Series, Youth's Companion Selections, and some standard literature. It is our desire that, as soon as they are capable of appreciating them, our pupils may read works of the best poets and writers, so that, even if they never attend other than our common schools, they may yet have acquired a taste for good reading.

In our schools lies the future strength of our people. No true citizen, whether he has pupils to send or not, can be indifferent to their prosperity. We urge a larger appropriation for the coming year, and promise that, so far as in our power lies, it shall be judiciously expended.
